SPOTLIGHT ON - GETTING ACTIVE

It's essential to be physically active if you want to live a healthy and fulfilling life into old age. People who do regular physical activity have a lower risk of:

- coronary heart disease and stroke
- type 2 diabetes
- bowel cancer
- breast cancer in women
- early death
- osteoarthritis
- hip fracture
- falls (among older adults)
- depression
- dementia, including Alzheimer's disease
- Research also shows that physical activity can boost self-esteem, mood, sleep quality and energy, as well as reducing your risk of stress.

Physical activity for adults and older adults

Benefits health	Type II Diabetes	-40%
Improves sleep	Cardiovascular disease	-35%
Maintains healthy weight	Falls, depression etc.	-30%
Manages stress	Joint and back pain	-25%

SPOTLIGHT ON - GETTING ACTIVE

BLOG by Leamington lifestyle medicine GP Dr Hussain Al-Zubaidi:
Movement matters: why supporting physical activity in NHS staff is good for everyone

Getting active can feel daunting, especially if you haven't been active for a while. But don't worry, every little bit helps. Here are some simple and enjoyable ways to incorporate activity into your daily routine, build active habits and start feeling the benefits of a more active lifestyle.

Start Small and Build Up Don't feel pressured to dive into intense workouts right away. Start with small, manageable activities like a 10-minute walk during your lunch break. Gradually increase the duration and intensity as you get more comfortable.

Make It Fun Find activities you enjoy. Whether it's dancing, cycling, swimming, or a brisk walk in the park, choose something that makes you happy. You're more likely to stick with it if you're having fun.

Set Realistic Goals Set achievable goals to keep yourself motivated. It could be as simple as taking the stairs instead of the elevator or aiming for 30 minutes of activity each day. Celebrate your progress, no matter how small.

Incorporate Activity into Your Routine Look for opportunities to be active throughout your day. Walk or cycle to work, do a quick workout during TV commercials, or stretch while waiting for your coffee to brew. Little bursts of activity add up.

Get Social Exercise with friends or join a local group. Socialising while being active can make the experience more enjoyable and hold you accountable. It's also a great way to meet new people who share your interests.

Track Your Progress Keeping track of your activity can be a great motivator. Use a fitness app, a journal, or a simple calendar to log your workouts and see how far you've come. It's encouraging to watch your progress over time.

Reward Yourself Reward yourself for reaching milestones. Treat yourself to something you enjoy, like a movie night, a new book, or a relaxing bath. Positive reinforcement can help build and maintain your new active habits.

Stay Positive Remember that building new habits takes time. Be patient with yourself and stay positive, even if you miss a day or two. Focus on your progress and keep moving forward.

Building an active lifestyle doesn't have to be overwhelming. By taking small steps and incorporating activities you enjoy, you can make movement a regular and rewarding part of your life. Start today and experience the positive changes that come with being more active!

Office Stretches and Exercises

What Are Movement Snacks?

Movement snacks are brief periods of physical activity, typically lasting 1–5 minutes, that you can sprinkle throughout your day instead of relying solely on longer exercise sessions. The concept is similar to a small food snack: just as a snack provides a quick boost of energy between meals, a movement snack gives your body a quick boost of activity to break up sedentary periods.

GET MORE ENERGY IN YOUR DAY WITH MOVEMENT SNACKS

A MOVEMENT SNACK IS A LITTLE POCKET OF MOVEMENT, JUST A COUPLE OF MINUTES OF MOVEMENT EVERY HOUR

Listen to your body - start where you are and gradually increase intensity/volume over time
